The Theatre Royal, Porthleven The Theatre Royal in Porthleven, Cornwall, England, is the only remaining working theatre in Cornwall. It is a Grade I listed building. History The Theatre Royal in Porthleven was opened in 1857 by Thomas Seacombe, its first manager. The Theatre Royal is now managed by the Helston Operatic Society. It has appeared in the annual Christmas pantomime at the end of every year since its opening. During the pantomime there are usually about 25 opera and musical performances in the street around the theatre. The main Porthleven High Street (near the harbour) becomes a stage. The Seacombe family Thomas Seacombe was born in 1825 at Porthleven, the son of Porthleven portmaster J. Seacombe (1787-1859). He worked as a shopkeeper and succeeded his father as portmaster in 1858. His first wife Mary Ann Hodgdon died in childbirth in 1857. He later married a widow, Emily Howie on 11 August 1857. They had one daughter, Mary Ann and three sons, Frederick William (1859-1881), Herbert Howie (1861-1936) and Percy Howie (1863-1936). It was Herbert Howie who inherited the management of the theatre in 1889 and ran it until his death in 1936. As a consequence, the Theatre Royal, Porthleven has been managed by
