After twenty years in the Pentecostal ministry I began to feel the need to do something different. I was getting bored. As a single father I felt like I needed to take a break and do something different. The idea of being a door to door preacher did not come from my past or my faith, but it was a natural next step. I also had a desire to write. I began with the idea of writing a sequel to my first novel that I self published when I was 16, but then decided to take it to a different level and do a movie with the same premise. As I continued to write, I decided to make the project truly authentic by having no outside company or direction, but when that story was finished I wanted to continue on the same storyline. I wanted to finish it like a story. So I went to the studio with the idea of making it into a feature. When they found it and raised her release date to July 21,2007, the girl noted that she was the one who showed Keaton how to pick locks. She was the reason he won the Academy Award in 1988 for Best Actor for his role in The Dark Knight. The girl told the police it was Keaton who was forced to defend himself by strangling the attacker with a cable tie. Not the cops, or the movie, but Keaton the guy who is rich but rides a motorcycle. The police found Keaton guilty and sentenced him to two years in prison. The fourth and final person to be trapped was Joe King, a minor character in the murders. He is the only character in the entire movie who actually tries to escape, only to end up dead, like so many other heroes before him.

Film is a big business, so you have to make it work and be convincing to as many people as possible. The first movie to think about in making a movie is the music. When your making a good film, you are also making a good film with the people you work with. I've shot a lot of films. I've gone to the movies to see other people. You look at films like "Spider-Man" or "The Usual Suspects," and they do have great directing, and you say, "Wow, what a great job these guys did." But have you ever wondered what direction you would be going if you walked into a film, into a theater, and you see a film that really gripped your attention? With a screenplay that asks us to consider the delicate balance of power with the 'right' to love, Anurag Kashyap succeeds in moments where he questions the moral and structural underpinnings of the Indian polity and society. That's the movie that makes you think, to make you rethink the fundamental assumptions and truths we take for granted. I'll be writing more about this because in the end, this is a movie about so much more than love, and you may not actually finish watching it at the end of the journey. It's that time of the year again when we get inundated with movies about non-existent, pseudo-erotic relationships, movies in which the protagonists are athletes, movie stars, and so on. But 'Kis Kisko Pyaar Karoon' is more than just a plain, run of the mill rom-com that most of us have seen it time and again. It's an affirming, timely, and exceptionally well crafted film that makes you stop and marvel at the intricacies of life and existence. 5ec8ef588b
